THE INSURANCE CAPITATION FEE

INSURANCE ACTS COMMITTEE OF THE B.M.A.

A meeting of the Insurance Acts Committee of the B.M.A., principally to discuss the matter of the insurance capitation fee, was held on June 12, under the chairmanship of Dr. E. A. GREGG. A number of resolutions from Panel Committees and B.M.A. Divisions urging that the claim for an increased fee be pursued were before the Committee.

A letter from the Ministry of Health dated May 31 stated that the Minister was not able wholly to agree with the figure of 5½d. as representing the cash value of the enhanced practice costs, but, in view of the introduction of legislation extending the insurance remuneration level from £250 to £420 per annum and the consequential increase of between 400,000 and 500,000 in the total number of insured persons entitled to medical benefit, he was prepared, as from the date of operation of the proposed legislation, if approved by Parliament, to agree to a consolidated increase of 6d. in the capitation rate, being an undetermined amount in respect of increased practice costs rounded off to take account of the new class of entrants into medical benefit. Several members of the Committee took exception to the fact that the Association had not been consulted by the Ministry as to the bringing in of the new class of insured persons, as was done when the level was raised from £150 to £250 during the last war.

The Chairman considered that a large proportion of practitioners would not seriously object to the inclusion of the new class provided that the remuneration resulting from such inclusion was comparable with that received in respect of the same class at the present time. The Minister seemed to recognize that a higher remuneration should be payable for the new class, and had suggested a moiety addition to the amount to which he was prepared to agree as representing the increase in practice expenses—the increase being spread out over the whole of the insured class—namely, the nineteen millions already insured and the half-million to be brought in. On this basis, if the 6d. offered by the Minister was regarded as 5½d. in respect of increased practice expenses, and ½d. in respect of the new entrants, the increase for the new class worked out at 1s. 8d. He thought the Committee should register a protest against the manner in which the new arrangement had been introduced, without sufficient opportunity being given to the Committee to consider the matter and, if thought necessary, to consult the profession.

A member pointed out that as it had been stated that the raising of the income limit from £250 to £420 was a recognition of the increased cost of living, doctors also should be entitled to some consideration in that respect, and this gave the Committee the opportunity to reopen the question of the capitation fee generally as relating to all insured persons. Other members supported this suggestion, and the opinion was strongly voiced that new classes should not have been brought into insurance without an opportunity being given to representatives of practitioners of raising the question of the adequacy of the capitation fee as related to this new class. It was also pointed out that in accepting the same capitation fee for this new class of persons as for those already insured, the profession—which when juveniles were brought in had pressed that the capitation fee should be the same for them as for adults—would be in a strong position to claim the same fee for dependants when these in due course were brought in.

The Committee eventually agreed to three resolutions. The first was that the Minister of Health should be informed of the Committee's dissatisfaction at his action in introducing legislation for raising the income limit for non-manual workers before the Committee had been consulted on the merits of the proposal. The second was that, as the Government had decided to legislate in order to bring into national health insurance a new group, the Committee desired to reopen the question of the adequacy of the existing basic capitation fee and to have it determined now, either as a prior issue or as part of the settlement of a general capitation fee for all insured persons, including the new group. By its third resolution the Committee decided to make no objection to the raising of the income limit for non-manual workers to £420, provided that the consolidated capitation fee in respect of both the existing and the newly added insured population was adequate. It was also agreed that a Conference of Panel Committees should be called so that practitioners could express their views on the subject, and that the Minister should be approached and informed that it was proposed to call such a conference.

Other Business

It was reported that the Ministry of Health had agreed to the Committee's claim for an increase in the ordinary portion of the Central Mileage Fund at the rate of £22,575 per annum as from July 1 next.

Representations had been made to the appropriate Government Departments in favour of medical practitioners being permitted to stock and issue war injury continuation certificates. It was found that in many cases the Assistance Board was willing to take a risk, in the interest of speedy payment, in the case of first certificates, and men were collecting such certificates from their doctors and being paid on them. After the first certificate, however, the question of title to benefit had to be ascertained before a man was given a blank certificate to take to his doctor, and there were serious difficulties in the way of allowing practitioners to stock and issue continuation certificates. The Assistance Board had agreed that if its attention was drawn to any delay in issuing medical certificates in any area to approved cases it would immediately take the matter up.

At the recent first meeting of the Medical Planning Commission the Insurance Acts Committee was asked to nominate four practitioners (one of whom should be engaged in colliery practice) for co-option to the Commission. The Committee made the following nominations: Dr. D .O. Twining (Salcombe, Devon), Dr. P. V. Anderson (Shildon, Co. Durham), Dr. I. G. Innes (Hull), and Dr. D. J. B. Wilson (High Wycombe).

The Committee agreed to advise practitioners engaged in national health insurance work to use the War Emergency Formulary now in course of preparation.

SOCIALIST MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

The following resolutions were passed at the annual general meeting of the Socialist Medical Association on May 25.

Employment of Refugee Doctors

That in view of the recent appeal for a thousand doctors from the United States and the decision to employ fourth and fifth year medical students as house officers, this meeting protests most strongly against the Government's failure to make use of the medical services of the anti-Fascist refugee doctors in this country. Since only about 100 of the 1,400 now in England are being allowed to use their medical skill and training, we demand that there should be an immediate speed-up of the machinery to effect the registration and employment of eligible alien doctors, and that those now employed on demolition and construction work in the Pioneer Corps be released for work in which their medical experience can be used.

Factory Medical Officers

That this meeting considers that the policy at present supported by the Ministry of Labour and National Service of the appointment of factory medical officers by factory managements would be improved upon, in the interests both of the workers and of the medical profession, by introducing a scheme whereby these officers would be employed by and responsible to a local or central authority and their duties co-ordinated with the work of the local medical officers of health.

EMPLOYMENT OF DOCTORS OF ENEMY NATIONALITY

The Minister of Health states (Circular 2405) that it was not intended that the phrase "total medical staff" in paragraph 2(c) of Circular 2312 (Supplement, March 22, p. 38) should be limited to resident medical staff. Visiting medical staff normally attached to the hospital may be included as well as the total resident medical staff employed in the hospital. In a hospital in which the medical staff includes at least two resident doctors of British nationality it will be permissible to employ one doctor of enemy nationality, even though the total medical staff may be less than five (in a hospital with fewer than 100 beds) or ten (in a hospital with 100 beds or over).

RATIONING OF CLOTHING AND SURGICAL GOWNS

The Board of Trade has stated that under present arrangements coupons must be surrendered for the purchase of operating gowns and white surgery coats worn by surgeons, doctors, and dentists. These garments are not covered by the term "workmen's overalls." The Board adds that the question of making some concession is under consideration. In the meantime the number of coupons required for these garments has provisionally been fixed at six. In the case of similar garments required for use in hospitals, practitioners should be able to obtain them through the special arrangements which have been authorized to enable hospitals to get supplies of certain articles coupon-free. Hospitals will give the trader a certificate specifying the goods needed and stating that they are for use in a hospital.

Capital Value of Practices

SIR,—A State service may be near at hand or far off, but before any such service is contemplated the first demand that the B.M.A. should make is that the capital invested in a practice should be returned, not necessarily on what the income is to-day but the actual amount paid for the practice at any time. This money represents a man's capital and often his life savings or borrowed money. No person in a democratic country should have this—probably the only source of income for his wife on his decease or capital for starting off his children in careers—confiscated. In no other business or profession is a business valued at nothing. A good practice has always been worth about two years' purchase, and for security of income it is probably worth more when compared with the purchase value in other professions and business.

Some correspondents in the Supplement give as their reason for seizure of capital values the fact that better hours and conditions of work, holidays, locumtenents in illness, and a pension will more than compensate. The opposite view can now be expressed. Many practitioners make by hard work over £2,000 a year; the most we shall be likely to get under a State service will be £1,200 to £1,500. It must be logic that capital should be returned if one is forcibly to have one's income reduced and one's freedom in work removed. No pension can compensate these two.—I am, etc.,

E. H. WALKER, M.B., B.S.

Torrington, Devon, June 15.

Why Save Petrol?

SIR,—Why save petrol? At this stage of the war it is proposed to hold a parade and march past of A.R.P. services in this area, at which the Regional Commissioner will take the salute. Half the authorities concerned were opposed to the idea, which was proceeded with on the casting vote of the chairman—a county official. It is proposed to have six rehearsals, which will involve sending eight or nine vehicles from this district a matter of twenty miles on seven occasions; and the seven other authorities will have to do likewise. There will be the cars of hordes of officials from the county authority, those of the heads of the local authorities and their clerks to be presented, and the commissioner's car will have to bring him from his Olympian abode, and we shall march past him in completely bogus array in uniforms borrowed for the occasion, as we have not yet been equipped with our own.

All this would be mildly amusing were it not for the fact that, all told, over 500 gallons of petrol are going to be wasted on a project whose value towards the war effort is exactly nil. I must confess that when I think of the difficulty I have in getting a bare minimum of petrol to carry on my practice and that here is enough petrol to last me for nearly a year being thrown away on a completely fatuous performance such as this, rage and disgust are my uppermost feelings and not amusement.—I am, etc.,

Stokesley, Yorks, June 14. H. M. MACGILL.
